

Color the: BANK BUTTERFLYFISH

long spines
for protection

long snout to probe for
tiny prey

young fish travel
in ocean currents
at the surface in order to populate
other reefs

dramatic markings
for species
recognition

USGS UNDERWATER VIDEO

reef top habitat; home for butterfly fish and angel fish

The bank butterfly fish is specially shaped to hover and navigate holes and crevices in the reef. They are typically found in pairs. At night they sleep inside large sponges.

